International Monetary Policy Shocks

The business and management department invites students and other members of the WVPU community to the Fall 2 faculty presentation of our Research Seminar Series. Please join us for Dr. Nikolaos Antonakakis' presentation on his research into international monetary policy shocks. He will speak about how he became interested in monetary policy, common policy shock examples, as well as the triumphs and setbacks he has experienced so far in his research. As with all of our faculty presentations in this series, students should leave with a better understanding of the research process - its pitfalls, challenges, and rewards. Both undergraduate and graduate students are encouraged to attend!
